Raising a Child who Prays (cont)

There were two guiding principles at work in Daniel's life as a young boy. As a captive of war, Daniel was brought against his will into Babylon. This Israelite boy, a foreigner in a new land, quickly distinguished himself among the other young men inducted into the Royal Academy (Dan. 1:4-17). One principal reason was that he knew the power of prayer and continued in that lifestyle throughout his youth and adulthood. From Daniel's life we conclude that:

Children must know the purpose of prayer.

Children must establish a pattern of prayer.

Purpose of Prayer: Daniel prayed for strength to deal with an oppressive law, and survived a night with the lions. Prayer is talking to God about anything that you're facing.

Pattern of Prayer: Good patterns provide focus and strategy to achieve goals. Children thrive on predictability. Jesus said, when you pray, go into your room. Daniel went to his upstairs room. Heartfelt prayer is best done in a private familiar space with limited distractions. Equally important is a specific time to pray. Daniel prayed three times a day. Like any habit it takes discipline and practice i.e. brushing your teeth, practicing the piano.

What to pray about? Daniel focused and visualized his prayer on the welfare of his people back home. Teaching children to cut out a picture of something that helps them visualize one of God's unmet promises for their life or a need in the family can help them find the right words to use in prayer—a prayer board-like a vision board representing things your child longs to see God do for them or thanking God for His blessings. Maybe a picture of Grandma who is in need of God's healing are ways of making prayer practical.
